We apologize for any cross-postings.

The Center for Assessment and Policy Development (CAPD) and MP Associates are excited to announce:

www.racialequitytools.org

Racial Equity Tools is a new Web site designed for people and groups across sectors and at all levels in the work of promoting racial equity. It is intended to help you encourage and support transformative change within communities, organizations, systems and individuals.

What's in it?
Racial Equity Tools includes more than 400 resources and links to help people understand, talk about and act intentionally and effectively to advance racial equity. There are also tips, suggestions and reflection questions, and a glossary of important terms. We thank the many people who contributed content and ideas (listed in Acknowledgements). The content includes 59 subject areas organized into four main sections: Essential Concepts and Issues, Assessing and Learning, Planning and Implementing, and Sustaining and Refining.

For example, Assessing and Learning includes Learning about a Community's History of Racial Dynamics as well as a tip sheet on Laying Out Your Assumptions: Understanding Your Theory of Change. Sustaining and Refining includes resources about creating a learning community and resources to help you address resistance and retrenchment.

Racial Equity Tools also links to additional resources via www.evaluationtoolsforracialequity.org. Both sites, like the field, are works in progress. We welcome feedback, insights and additional resources.

Please share this announcement with your colleagues via email, Web sites, listservs, newsletters and other means. Thank you.
