

VICTORIA UNIVERSITY POSTDOCTORAL RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

Victoria University is making a difference in our world through excellence and engagement in applied research.

The Australian Research Council rates Victoria University's leading areas of research at between 'world standard' (an ERA rating of 3) and 'well above world standard' (a rating of 5). These 15 areas of research strength include sport and exercise science, medical physiology, chemical engineering, food science and cultural studies.

Opportunities now exist for outstanding early career researchers to join our dynamic and innovative research groups in these leading areas.

Postdoctoral Research Fellowships are currently available for the following projects:

- Protecting neurons to prevent side-effects of anti-cancer chemotherapy;
- Measuring and mining genetic variations related to type II diabetes (industry collaboration);
- Innovative membrane technologies for low energy nitrogen recovery (industry collaboration);
- Food, health, memory and African-Australian transitions;
- Professional learning for social inclusion in education;
- Towards zero discharge dairy facilities (industry collaboration);
- The influence of gene variation on muscle adaptation to high-intensity interval training.

One Fellow will be appointed per project. Fellowship appointments are full-time, fixed term for 4 years and include opportunities to teach up to 25% of a full-time position. Positions will be based at Academic Levels A or B: $55,323 - $93,846 per annum plus 17% superannuation contribution.

For further information visit our website.

Applications close: 4pm Wednesday 6 March 2013.
