

In and from the field: an ethnographic excursion into the life of an ethnographer

Friday 26 July 2013, 2-4pm Murdoch University

South Street campus. Education & Humanities building Room: 3.041

Dr Annekie Joubert from Humboldt University, Berlin will present a film and seminar on the processes of her ethnographic project concerning the life and work of German missionary in South Africa, Carl Hoffmann.

Dr Joubert will address a range of issues including the archiving of Hoffmann's personal diaries, photos and art works and preservation of visual data as a permanent scientific resource. She invites discussion about issues such as: visual systems as an integral part of research; advantages of visual recordings; visual representation as a research tool; ethics and the use of visual data after fieldwork; protective policies when using visual documentation; production of identity and the protection and ownership of intellectual property rights; re-defining the dynamic changes of visual data in an age of globalisation and new technology; and the contestation of ethnographic filmmaking as the so-called "babysitting device for busy teachers".

ALL WELCOME
