Building critical thinking in a post truth classroom

Full day of professional development, Tuesday 23 July
State Library | $170 in-person, $100 virtual

In a “post-truth” era, where people are more likely to accept an argument based around emotions than facts, and where misinformation is rampant, it is essential for educators to equip students with the skills to discern credible sources, question information, and think critically.

Come join us and listen to expert keynote speakers as they discuss the complexities of the digital age, how to navigate it and equip educators with effective strategies and tools for fostering critical thinking in students.
