

State Library of Western Australia Contract Cataloguers - At-Risk Audio-Visual Digitisation Project

Introduction

The State Library of Western Australia (SLWA) plays a key role in empowering Western Australian individuals and communities, transforming their lives by connecting them to information and ideas. The State Library collects materials of international significance to capture, preserve and tell the stories of WA's rich history. It also delivers a wide range of services, programs and events to inspire creativity, curiosity and support lifelong learning.

SLWA seeks contract cataloguers with demonstrated expertise and experience in cataloguing and describing library resources to appropriate standards. Experience cataloguing audio-visual formats using Library Management Systems and supporting systems is highly desirable.

SLWA's audio-visual collections are held on a range of formats and form part of the highly valued WA Heritage Collection. The content spans more than 100 years and varies widely from broadcast standard to amateur recordings and includes a range of government and private sector productions, motion picture films, short films, advertisements, documentaries, music, interviews, and personal recordings capturing people, places, and events unique to Western Australia.
